THE REPUBLIC OF HAITI

NATIONAL PALACE, PORT-AU-PRINCE

HAITI, 1919

THE public of Haiti occupies the western portion of the island of the same name, less than one of 100 square miles and a population of 2,000,000. It is one of the most populous of the American republics, taking into account its area with its inhabitants. The square mile of Haiti is a land of mountains and valleys and including the Gulf of Gonave, around whose shores are several fine natural harbors. The principal products of the island are coffee, sugar, cotton, tobacco, and legumes. In the forests and deep valleys there is a wealth of iron, manganese, and other minerals. The principal products of the island are coffee, sugar, cotton, tobacco, and legumes. In the forests and deep valleys there is a wealth of iron, manganese, and other minerals. The principal products of the island are coffee, sugar, cotton, tobacco, and legumes. In the forests and deep valleys there is a wealth of iron, manganese, and other minerals.

On the 1st of January, 1919, the republic of Haiti was proclaimed on the 9th day of October, 1889, and a military republic form of government was adopted. The executive and judicial branch of the government is composed of two chambers—a chamber of representatives and a senate. The two together forming the national assembly. The chamber of representatives consists of 30 members, elected by the people for a term of three years and the senate of 30 members chosen by the representatives from lists furnished by a board of electors and by the president of the republic, for a term of six years. The senate is renewed by thirds every two years. The national assembly meets annually on the first Monday in April for a period of three months, which may be extended for another 30 days. The president of the republic is elected by the national assembly for a term of seven years and cannot be re-elected except after an interval of at least one term. He receives a salary of approximately $21,000 per annum. A cabinet of six secretaries, each in charge of some department of the government, assists the president. They are appointed by and responsible to him, and receive an annual salary of about $6,000 each. The departments are as follows: Foreign Affairs and public instruction, war and navy, interior and general police, finance and commerce, justice and worship, and works and agriculture. The present constitution of Haiti is incomplete reports would seem to indicate that conditions for the year were satisfactory, but full reliance upon which alone estimates can be based are not available. A serious effort was made by the government to balance the budget. In many instances improvements were being authorized to show that the country was ambitious to be brought up to modern standards. A compulsory education law, applicable to the primary grades was passed and a new water tax for the capital Port-au-Prince approved and the contract for a Haitian National railroad was signed. Haiti has given considerable encouragement to foreign investment, thus this and former years and the changes which will follow these conditions of this kind are sure to bring the country materially within a short time.

Products and Industries. The industries of the country are chiefly agriculture. The most important product being coffee of an excellent quality. Cacao is also grown extensively, the annual output being estimated at 5,000,000 pounds. Cotton is exported in considerable quantities of the same.

Perished Counting Expenses
A man who had been in the river for a long time, counting the expenses of his trip, had been in the river for a long time, counting the expenses of his trip, had been in the river for a long time, counting the expenses of his trip.

Some Uses for Hairs
There is only a passing emotion—something upon which little people or eyes turn. We get a certain amount of diversion out of it and some salutary lessons. It is a sad sight to see a man who is not needed in the world, and who is not needed in the world, and who is not needed in the world.

The Grant Quality

With some men style is inborn, and they can tell by innate perception the right thing in clothes, but the great majority have to trust to others for the correctness of their dress. Both classes, however, are beginning to recognize the Grant Quality as the correct article, and if it comes from Grant's it's right as to style, quality and price.

The Source of Cottolene is the Sunny South The Source of Good Health is Cottolene

Cottolene is made from the choicest of cotton oil. From Cottonfield to Kitchen—human hands never touch the oil from which Cottolene is made.

Pies, doughnuts and cakes cooked with Cottolene can be fearlessly enjoyed by the most determined dyspeptic, for Cottolene makes food digestible as well as palatable.

There is no substitute for Cottolene, because there is no shortening as good as Cottolene. It is pure, clean, neutral in taste and flavor, and absolutely the most economical and healthful frying and shortening medium. It goes one-third farther than butter or lard.

GROWING COTTON IN SOUTH

With Intelligent Farming 30,000,000 Acres Will Supply World With Sufficient Amount

The South gives a fairly good census on cotton production than the world needs. The average could be increased to many times the present amount. What was planned this year season and more intelligent farming methods are constantly increasing the average yield.

About 15,000,000 bales have been grown in the United States this season. In the season of 1929-30 there was a crop which was at that time looked upon as quite as large as this year's crop is considered to be.

The phenomenal crop of that season was about 7,000,000 bales and this was nearly 500,000 bales larger than the previous record yield. The first shipment of cotton from this country to Europe was in 1794. The shipment consisted of eight bales and was held up by the custom officials at Liverpool because they had never heard of cotton grown here.

In 1795 only five bales of cotton were exported from this country and only six bales in 1796. It might be remembered that these early shipments were rather poor cotton for it is recorded that they contained for some time in warehouse in Liverpool. The first purchase could be found in the tale just now is of a great reduction in the cotton acreage next spring. If prices go below seven cents there will probably be a fairly small acreage for one season, and then the next season may see 2,000 and not more if in the world needs.

According to a writer in Moody's Magazine the first time the cotton crop was so small a reduction in the acreage was made. The writer

HER INTUITION OF PROPOSAL

Gushing Little Thing Was Not Worried About Mischance of Leap Year —Parents Must Have Time

Dear me! she sighed only two months more of leap year.
Yes, he replied, but why are you worried about it?
I'm not worried—not to the least.
Why did you think I was worried?
I thought you said it as if you were worried.

I can't understand why you didn't run away if you thought that.
Why should I run away?
Because of your fear that I might be frightened at the shortness of the time remaining before in you at once if you did not listen to me.

I had no idea that you ever thought of proposing to me.
No more than you supposed I had ever thought of your proposing to me.
—Is that it?

Well, perhaps that wouldn't be just the way to put it. If even you ever thought I might propose to you sometime.

Are you serious?
Serious? I don't believe I quite —Oh, my! I'm so happy. You know something, seemed to tell me you were going to propose to me this evening. If I gave you half a chance I don't mind me in the wedding day tomorrow. Mamma and papa could never be so sure to have me without plenty of time to get used to the idea. And I just couldn't get ready before a week from next Thursday at the earliest.

HIS REPLY

The Good Old Man who you excuse for being in the house like this?

The thing—An old fellow who never buy a railroad ticket get out of it.

Not Surprised
There is a crowd of old farmer in the county whose time for driving a close horse trade rivals that of David Harum.
